Reading Comprehension

The Piper of Hamelin

Hamelin is a beautiful town near the river Weser. The people of Hamelin lived very well, but they were not happy because there were rats in the town. They ran about the streets and in the houses, they made nests in the people's hats. They made so much noise that people could not talk to each other.

The people went to the Mayor and said: "Take the rats away or you will not be our Mayor."

At that moment a man came into the room. His dress was yellow and red and in his hand he had a pipe. He said; "I am a piper and when I play my pipe, all animals follow me. I will take all the rats away from your town for a bag of gold."

The Mayor said: "Oh, my good man! Help us, please. Take these rats away, and I will give you a very big bag of gold."

The piper went out into the street and began to play. His music was beautiful. The Piper played and played. The rats began to run out of the houses. They were running out of the doors and jumping out of the windows. There were black rats, grey rats, big rats, little rats, young rats and grandfather rats. The Piper was walking along the streets and the rats were following him. He came to the river Weser and the rats jumped into the river. There were no more rats in the town. The people of Hamelin were happy. The Mayor was happy too. Soon the Piper came to the Mayor and said: "Please, give me my big bag of gold." The Mayor cried: "What! Go away from here! He didn't give the Piper a bag of gold. The piper went out into the street. He began to play his pipe again. The music was nice and many children were following the Piper. They went to the gates of the town and went away. The children and the Piper never came back to Hamelin.
